

Dear Future Student

I want to share my journey with you and tell you how I ended up at Nottingham Trent University (NTU), because it has truly been one of the most meaningful experiences of my life so far.

I was first introduced to NTU by a continuing student who spoke positively about the university. She shared her experiences with such confidence and joy that it sparked my curiosity. I decided to do my own research online to confirm what I had heard, and honestly, everything checked out. From the modern, well-equipped classrooms to the university's holistic approach to education and the many awards it has received, NTU stood out as a place that genuinely values learning and student development. That was when I knew it was the right choice for me.

Leaving my home country to study in the UK was not an easy decision. I had moments of doubt and many questions running through my mind, how I would adapt to a new environment, whether I would make friends, and how life would feel so far away from home. Despite these worries, I remained hopeful, especially because of the encouraging reviews I received from the student already studying at NTU.

After deciding on NTU, the biggest challenge was figuring out how to make it happen financially. Studying abroad comes with a significant cost, and at one point it felt overwhelming. By God's grace, I was awarded a scholarship from the university, and that moment felt like a clear confirmation. I remember telling myself, "This is it, this is where I'm meant to be."

Since arriving here, settling in has been much easier than I expected. NTU already feels like a home away from home. I have made a few friends, and their companionship has made the transition smoother and more joyful. One thing I deeply appreciate is how much the university prioritises the wellbeing of its students, especially international students. There is always support available, and you never feel alone.

Academically, the UK education system is quite different from what I was used to back home, so I struggled at first. However, I reached out to one of my lecturers and explained my concerns. He was incredibly supportive and took time to guide me through what is expected of me, the resources available, and how to succeed within the system. That support made a huge difference.

I truly enjoy my classes because they are made up of people from different cultural and academic backgrounds. Learning from others' experiences makes every class engaging and interesting.

If anyone ever asks me about studying in the UK, I would confidently recommend NTU.

“NTU is more than just a university, it is a place where dreams are nurtured, and potentials are carefully shaped”.

Warm regards,

Eric Tenkorang

Eric Tenkorang
Ghana, MA Sociology